THE POST OFFICE.

THE new system of sorting mails on board the steamers has come into operation so quietly that many of our readers are doubtless unaware of the change. The prompt delivery of the Shaughai mails upon the two last occasions has perhaps attracted sufficient notice to cause an expression of surprise, but the immense addition made to the public convenience has hardly been realized. The outgoing mail of this morning took with it the official deputed to act as "Marine Sorter" on board the outward-bound steamer due here from Singapore on the 29th instant. so that instead of the delay heretofore necessary in the distribution of letters The service will be performed by and papers, we shall have the pleasure of knowing that the "second gun" heralds the speedy arrival of our home correspondence. Too much praise cannot be accorded to the Post Office officials in having thus abbreviated the nuisance of waiting for delivery. It may, and often does, matter very little that three or four hours are added to the six weeks which intervone between England and China, so far as our actual interests are concerned. But all residents in the East-especially if exnecting news of importance—have realized the unsettled feeling which takes possession of the mind during the interval which chapses between the time when the signal gun has been fired and one knows that his letters are, within a mile or so of their destination, and the hour when expectant coolies may crush towards the Post Office windows in keen competition for "my massa tween the open ports is another facility due to the energy of the Colonial Postmaster General, and we can only hope that popular rumour is correct in crediting him with the endeavour to establish a similar facility between this Colony and Australia, as his efforts would most probably prove successful. The Money Order Office is another institution to the want of which frequent attention has been called, and regarding which representations have, we believe, already been made to the home Postal authorities. Facilities of this nature cannot be carped at by the least progressive of the residents in China.
